An Evening Echo.
It is expedient to associate with those who have looked into the world, who know men, understand business, and can give you good intelligence and good advice when they are wanted.—BISHOP HORNE.

The Parkersburg State Journal runs a "funny" column on its editorial page and calls it "Near Blarney from Near Blarney." This ought to be parsed, diagrammed, explained and described, but, of course, it is none of the Telegram's business.

The Parkersburg State Journal runs a "funny" column on its editorial page and calls it "Near Blarney from Near Blarney." This ought to be parsed, diagrammed, explained and described, but, of course, it is none of the Telegram's business.

Cruelty of a Crowd.
A crowd, sooner than be deprived of its promised rare show, will jeer a man on to his death. What happened in Kansas a few weeks ago happened in Ohio last week. In each case the aviator victim knew his machine was not working properly and that a flight would be perilous, but the courage to say "no" to spectators shouting angrily for their promised entertainment was lacking.

If in either case the aviator had been able to take aside every individual in the crowd and state the situation, nine-tenths of the spectators would have told him not to go. Men taken by themselves are usually reasonable and humane. A crowd is only too apt to be unreasonable and cruel, says the Chicago Tribune. It can not be argued with. It refuses to listen to explanations.

The aviator who allows himself to be killed as one of the features of a fair, ought to understand what awaits him in case he finds his machine does not work well. He must consent to be "butchered to make a human holiday," or have sufficient strength of mind to defy the hoots and jeers of a disappointed crowd, which howls down all his explanations and excuses.

Bland is Anxious.
Senator George W. Bland's West Union Record contains the following:

"We are anxious to see how many of last winter's traitors and bribe-takers will be vindicated by their constituents."

Senator Bland's anxiety may well grow. Everything possible is being done by the Democratic state machine to fill the next legislature with just such men as Senator Bland says he is anxious about. It may not be deemed advisable by the machine to re-elect quite a number of the present members of the legislature because of the notoriety that has grown out of their course in the legislature. But, Senator Bland and all others may paste it in their hats as a foregone conclusion that the machine will endeavor to elect men of the stripe of those who were used by it last winter.

What is Senator Bland going to do with several of the hold-over members of the state senate, to whom his opinion as expressed here is applied? Will he sit idly by and tolerate their presence and association during another regular session of the legislature, or will he make it so warm for them they will resign?

Why Accuse the Innocent?
Senator Bland's newspaper contains the following editorial declaration:

"Every honest, decent Democrat and Republican in the state who is not blinded by partisanship believes that anywhere from one-half to three-fourths of the Democratic members of the legislature and a considerable number of the Republicans of that body were purchased."
So far as the Democratic end of the legislature is concerned, the Telegram sees no reason to differ from Senator Bland. But, his newspaper is certainly not warranted to accusing Republican members, for the reason that they were not members of the Democratic senatorial caucus, nor did they vote for Democrats for the United States Senate. When Senator Bland undertakes to make the impression that Republicans were in the dragnet that has caught the Democratic party and is holding it down to the low level of elected legislators placed in it, he merely weakens the strength he is using to free his party. Why accuse men who had nothing to do as the records show with the miserable work done by the legislature?

A High School Bank.
A novel experiment in practical instruction of children was started at the Washington, D. C., high school the other day when the Washington High School Bank was formally opened for business. A regular bank has been started in the school where the pupils may deposit their funds, and withdraw money just as they would in any national bank in the city. A steel safe, with the usual bank combination, has been installed in the building. Three of the teachers of the high school have been appointed the advisory board, although the officers of the bank will be boys and girls who are students at the school. The office of president, vice president, cashier, receiving teller, paying teller, bookkeeper and a board of directors will be appointed from among the pupils. The board to consist of one pupil from the third, the fourth, the fifth, the sixth, the seventh and the eighth semesters. Deposits ranging from ten cents to $10 will be accepted, and it is believed that every student in the high school will soon be a depositor. Many of the students are the children of wealthy parents, who grant them a weekly allowance, some of which the children will want to save. There are also many boys who work outside of school hours, and it is expected that these boys will deposit their earnings. It is expected that dividends will be declared from time to time. The purpose of the bank is to teach students the habits of thrift and at the same time make them familiar with banking methods, which is most commendable, and should meet with satisfactory results.

Goff and Roosevelt.
"Judge Goff is not a candidate." That is a favorite headline with the Democratic machine press of this state. Of course, he is not a candidate. No one ever said he was one. That does not mean, however, that he will not be chosen United States senator the next time the legislature meets in regular session. There is no necessity for him to become a candidate as the people will look after campaign matters in connection with him themselves. They already have his election under such headway that the Democratic state machine can not stem the popular tide, no matter how often its press declares that Judge Goff is not a candidate. The Wheeling Intelligence-Herald hits the nail squarely on the head, when it says editorially:

"Holding the high position which he does, it was not to be expected that Judge Goff would at any time become an active candidate for political honors. Such a candidacy on the part of Judge Goff has never been considered by the Intelligence-Herald as even remotely possible. However, we have in the history of this country many notable cases of the office seeking the man; of a call to public duty so strong, so imperative, so unanimous, that the recipient of that call, has responded to it even against his personal inclinations and desires. Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for the vice-presidency by the Republicans of the United States in convention assembled, against his most vigorous protest, and that nomination led direct to his occupancy of the greatest office in the gift of the American people."

"The Intelligence-Herald believes that the Republicans of West Virginia, and by that it means the majority of the people of West Virginia, want Nathan Goff in the United States Senate. If they want him there they can put him there, and from a Republican legislature elected by the voters of West Virginia, Judge Goff will not refuse an election to the United States Senate."

Theodore Roosevelt as the intelligence-Herald reminds the public did not decline the nomination for the vice-presidency, and Judge Goff will not decline to serve the people that love him so well.

The Postmaster General.
Postmaster General Hitchcock is making a big mark for himself in Washington and has given splendid evidence of his superior executive ability. The Pittsburg Gazette-Times thus acknowledges these facts in an editorial:
Postmaster General Hitchcock's aerial flights on Long Island the other day with Captain Beck, of the United States army, carrying 78 pounds of mail for delivery, was a small matter in itself, but it illustrates and illuminates in its way the quality of mental alertness and up-to-dateness that has helped to make the head of the postal service of the United States the conspicuous success he is admitted to be, even by men who would have been just as well pleased were there a different story to tell. The postmaster general is not looking toward the establishment of a regular aerial postal service in the near future, it is true, and no doubt considers such a thing still in the land of dreams, except for some emergency use; he was merely giving personal expression in a practical way to an interest in scientific progress along lines that test a man's head and nerve as well as his sportsmanlike spirit.

Hitchcock has been a good postmaster general because he is composed of the stuff of which good men are made. He is a student, but no bookish recluse. He keeps in touch with human development and takes an active and keen interest in the things that make the pulses of red-blooded men beat faster, but does not let it interfere with business. He is awake and progressive. He has made one of the conspicuous successes of the Taft administration. He has maintained the postal service at the high standard of effectiveness in which he found it, extending it to keep abreast or even ahead of the commercial growth of the nation, while wiping out an inherited deficit of nearly $17,500,000. He has even accumulated a surplus of $1,000,000 since paying off the debt of the postal department to the general treasury.

It would have been a proud achievement had he accomplished this by the end of the term of the administration, but to have done it in the comparatively short period since June 30, 1906, is to be worthy of laurels. There were uncompromising predictions when Hitchcock's appointment was announced of what would happen, but he has amply vindicated the judgment that selected him for the office he has filled so ably and which he may be said to adorn. He has succeeded not merely because he set out to succeed, but because he keeps his mind fresh and active by maintaining and feeling an interest in all that is of moment to his fellow men, as in the matter of aerial post-riding, and in his fellow men themselves.

WIFE MURDER
Is to Be the Charge on Which Philippi Man is to Be Tried.

PHILIPPI, Sept. 30.—On October 5, Martin Phillips is to be arraigned on trial for the murder of his wife, and one of the most sensational cases in the history of Barbour county is expected to develop. The state alleges the murder was most brutal, and that the man set fire to the clothing of his wife and burned her so severely that death followed. Her screams attracted a large number of persons to the scene, and the state alleges that on her death bed the woman made a confession charging her husband with the murder, which several heard. There are other remarkable circumstances attending the death of the woman, which it is said, had been threatened several times by the husband.

Domestic troubles were the cause of many quarrels.

BONDS
EMPIRE BUILDING

BONDS HAVE THREE GREAT ADVANTAGES OVER ORDINARY MORTGAGES, VIZ:

(1) The return on real estate loans are limited to the interest received, whereas, in addition to the interest, bonds enhance in value while the property enhances, and often may be sold at a considerable profit.

(2) Holders of bonds are free from the necessity of watching over the matters of insurance, payment of property taxes, etc., as the Trustee relieves them of such responsibility.

(3) Real estate mortgages are slow assets.

FIRST CLASS BONDS MAY ORDINARILY BE PROMPTLY AND ADVANTAGEOUSLY SOLD AND THE INTEREST RETURN IS REGULAR AND DEPENDABLE.

"To begin with, music is music, and it is played. Comfortably seated, I listened to the familiar strains of music of the "Isle of Spice." First came the comely girls and they can sing. Then came the comedy. Oh you sailors! Then came more girls and more singing. Then more comedy, beauty and singing. The lieutenant appeared—well then the orchestra spread itself and the maxines were shown to advantage. Packed houses greeted the most popular idea that has taken Clarksburg
